for an old game this still holds up to dying light. cutting zombies apart is no sweat and after i realized throwing your weapons deals more damage while not reducing durability made the game too easy. gameplay is fun and driving your car feels solid until you get stuck in something. what i dont like about the game is the fact zombies can hit you even when your driving your armoured vehicle which is dumb, and the flashlight needs to recharge the battery after some time, kinda dumb. dead island is a big open world with different chapters, but a open world with barrelly anything to explore in my opinion. while exploring a few 20+ houses on the sea i didnt find anything, not even loot or any mods. i spent atleast 6 hours on exploring alone and were dissappointed. other than that the game is still solid and the visual upgrade was a nice touch. i recommend getting this game! sorry for my awful grammar. I was trying hard to like this game but I don't enjoy it at all. The only good thing about it is the graphic and level design - it runs on Dying Light engine so it looks really good, has an excellent summer atmosphere and makes me want to jump into a pool during a summer day. But that's all. Missions and quests are simple "go there and bring X", player-controllable cars look all the same, objects like baloons have no physics and are more like glued to the ground, characters act weird (hey my husband just died but bring me X and Y and I will be smiling like if it was my dream to be surrounded by zombies on a strange island...), the protagonists have no personality and rarely speak.

This is just a simple zombie game, maybe it's fun with a few people in coop but it's horrible as a single-player experience. Byt Dying Light instead, it's much better.. Skill needed:

Bugs:

- \u2610 The game itself is a bug...
- \u2610 Bugs are ruining the game
- \u2611 Loads of bugs
- \u2610 Bugs
- \u2610 Some bugs
- \u2610 None. The original Dead Island was a nice game, shame they removed it from Steam. The Definitive Edition still has bugs and glitches, but nothing that's too bad. It's a fun game (with friends), in my opinion. The combat machanics are sometimes really bad (like a zombie throwing a weapon, will kill you or allmost kill you. But using melee on a zombie takes serveral swings. And guns don't really do much damage). I would say, just buy Dying Light, it's a better zombie experience than Dead Island is. Would strongly recommend to buy it on sale, 7\u271310.
